[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN

DATES TO MARCH 27.

Congressional.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—In the Senate, a bill was passed extending the charter of the city of Washington.

Howard made an ineffectual attempt to have the joint resolution granting the right of way for the Memphis and El Paso railroad, referred to the Pacific Railroad Committee.

A bill to carry into effect the Mexican claims treaty was passed.

Several bills relating to the District of Columbia were introduced, also a bill to remove political disabilities.

Nye introduced a bill to insure the completion of the Washington Monument. The bill makes Vanderbilt, Stewart and others a corporation for the purpose.

Howard submitted a substitute for the House joint resolution in regard to meetings of the Union Pacific Railroad Company. It allows the stockholders to meet in Washington on March 31st, and elect a Board of Directors. It also authorizes the Company to establish a general office at such places in the United States as they may select.

Fessenden made an ineffectual effort to have the Indian appropriation bill considered.

The Financial bill was taken up.

Kellogg withdrew his pending amendments.

Wilson moved his amendment requiring the Secretary of the Treasury, when the greenbacks and the national bank circulat. exceed $350,000,000, to fund the United States notes into 10 40's till the amount of notes outstanding is reduced to $350,000,000.

Conkling argued generally against the bill. He opposed any legislation for the reduction of the bank circulation in any part of the country.

Williams said the withdrawal of circulation from certain States proposed by the Finance Committee would be a breach of faith.

Sherman defended the bill, denying that it proposed injustice to any portion of the country. He objected to the amendments of Williams and Wilson, because they involved the question of funding greenbacks which implied a return to specie payment.

Sprague opposed the bill, claiming that it would not afford the promised relief to the South.

Morton spoke at length in defence of the bill, opposing the amendment of Wilson, which he characterized as substantially a proposition for the Treasury to disburse $2,500,000 annually to allow New England the undisturbed enjoyment of an unjustly large proportion of the banking circulation, and it proposed this also in direct violation of the act to strengthen the public credit. Morton was followed by Fessenden, in opposition to Williams' amendment which was then rejected.

After further discussion, the Senate went into Executive session, after which it took up and passed the bill to abolish the office of Chief of Staff. Adjourned till Monday.

In the House, Banks, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported a joint resolution, declaring the sympathy of the people of the United States for the people of Cuba, and that Congress will sustain the President when he deems it expedient to recognize the independence and sovereignty of the Republican Government.

Pomeroy introduced a bill to protect the rights of actual settlers upon the public domain.

After the business of the morning hour, there being a call of the various committees for private bills, Cessna from the Committee on Elections, reported that Cuvode had a prima facie right to the seat from the Twenty-first District of Pennsylvania.

Paine, on behalf of four members of the Committee, made an opposite report.

Both reports were ordered printed.

Butler called up his motion to reconsider the vote referring the Tenure of Office Repeal Bill to the Judiciary Committee, and suggested to add to the House bill a section requiring the President to return all nominations to Congress within thirty days after being made.

Considerable sparring ensued, Garfield and Farnsworth, speaking of Butler, Logan and others, as having allied themselves with the Democrats on this measure, which charge Logan refuted.

After considerable discussion back and forth in which a slight passage at arms occurred between Butler and Bingham, Butler moved the previous question, which the House refused to second, the Democrats voting in the negative, a circumstance to which Butler called attention, asking "where are our allies now?"

Bingham made one hour's speech in favor of concurring in the Senate amendment, arguing that it was substantially a repeal of the law.

The debate was continued by Davis, Garfield, Schenck, Blair and others, and finally at five o'clock the debates closed. The vote of reference was reconsidered and the House refused to concur in the Senate amendment, by ayes 70, noes 99. So the bill goes back to the Senate as a simple repeal of the law. Adjourned until Monday.

Washington News.

CHICAGO, March 27.—The Republican's special says Fessenden thinks the day of adjournment cannot be fixed until the Indian appropriation bill is disposed of.

Secretary Boutwell has notified fifty female clerks that they will be discharged at the end of the month. He is instituting a thorough inquiry into the state of the Department of the Treasury.

The Tribune's special says the House Military Committee has agreed to report favorably on a joint resolution extending for a year the law allowing soldiers sixteen dollars a month. Unless this is passed, the pay of soldiers will be reduced in August to the amount before the war.

The recent order mustering out twenty infantry regiments will save the Government $15,000,000 annually.

Secretary Fish declines to receive Lennes, the Minister of the Cuban Insurgent government, in an official capacity. Lennes will appeal to Congress.

No nomination of Grant's has yet been rejected. Longstreet's was passed by yesterday, because it was known that it would lead to a long discussion.

At an interview to-night between the President and a delegation of Missourians, representing the Conservative and Republican parties, the President said he thought the best plan to quiet opposing parties in Mississippi would be for Congress to authorize the resubmitting of the Constitution to the people, a separate vote to be taken on the features objected to by the Conservatives, meantime the present military command or to control the State.

The mail service has been extended on the Central Pacific. Five hundred and ninety seven miles of track have been laid, and six hundred and twenty miles of grading finished to Ogden.

Nominations and Confirmations

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Among the nominations sent to the Senate to day were George Sims for Associate Judge of Montana, and William Kohns for Collector of Customs in Alaska.

The rush of parties for appointments to office in the Treasury Department is so great that an order will be issued excluding applicants for office until after each day's mail is read.

The Commanders of several Arsenals are directed to reduce the number of enlisted men in the Ordnance Department.

Grant discharges those whose services are dispensed with.

The Senate to day confirmed the following nominations: Commander Calhoun to be Captain in the Navy. Lieutenant Commanders Carpender and Kirkland as Commanders. R. W. Clarke as Third Auditor of the Treasury. Giles A. Smith as Second Assistant Postmaster. Jen. Moses H. Grinnell, Collector of Customs at New York. Andrew B. Cornell, Surveyor of New York. R. E. Merritt, Naval Officer of New York. F. A. Wilson, Collector of Customs at Puget Sound. The Senate has confirmed as Postmasters John Cree, Georgetown, Colorado. H. F. Bennett, Denver. H. L. Street, Sonora.

Louisiana Affairs.

NEW ORLEANS, March 27.—Auditor Wickliffe, who was arrested yesterday but released on bail, publishes a card warning the public against transacting business with the Auditor's Bureau. He says the office was illegally seized by Governor Warmouth, and that the financial department of the Government was virtually suspended. Upon presenting himself at the Auditor's office yesterday with an appointment from Governor Warmouth, Delpine was refused possession by Wickliffe, whereupon the latter was ejected by the Superintendent of Police. Legal opinions are given that the Governor has no right to act. Wickliffe and that Auditor's bond only impeachment can implement.

Georgia Affairs

ATLANTA, March 26. A letter from a Republican paper published in the interior of the State protests against the action of the Republican party in Georgia. It shows how the Fifteenth Amendment was defeated by combinations between Governor Bullock, Gen. Hill and Rebel leaders. The moderate Republicans think the State can be again reconstructed. President Grant should appoint the Governor.

Miscellaneous

ATLANTA, March 26. A negro charged with murder and rape was taken from the jail in Dooley county on Tuesday night, by a disguised mob, and hanged to death.

HARTFORD, March 27. A firm in this city has received a contract to build a granite marble mausoleum to the memory of Jesse Beach, at a cost of $75,000.

NEW YORK, March 27.—A mechanic employed on Stevens' Battery publishes a letter stating that the men were treated like dogs.

The Methodist Book Concern has paid a million dollars for a magnificent building on Broadway and Eleventh streets.

CHICAGO, March 27.—A negro confined in a cell in the county jail yesterday deliberately set fire to his bed. Four other negroes were in the cell, which was very small. Before relief could reach them all four of them were badly burned. It is feared that three may die.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The Pacific Mail Steamship Company's steamer Herman was totally lost seventy miles north of Yokohama, with Japanese troops on board.

West Indies and Mexico.

HAVANA, March 26.—The appointment of Plumb is favorably received by the community.

A letter received from Mexico states that secret interviews between Rosecrans and Juarez are frequent, the former urging the latter to recognize the French loan.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

MADRID, March 25.—The conscription act of the Cortes, passed yesterday, provides that no more men shall be raised by conscription than are really required by the Government to fill the ranks of the army to the standard strength. The Minister of War had previously demanded authority to raise twenty five thousand recruits for this purpose.

LONDON, March 26.—Letters from Paraguay report Lopez at Parabili, fifteen leagues from Asuncion, with 5,000 soldiers and 30,000 non combatants, consisting of families who have followed him to the interior, and are encamped in the vicinity. General Miltre, with the allied forces, marched into the country to seize certain mountain passes, the occupation of which will prove fatal to the Paraguayans.

NEVADA.

VIRGINIA, March 27.—The bullion shipments by express yesterday amounted to $24,825 39, $13,026 41 by Wells, Fargo & Co. and $11,799 98 by the Union Pacific Co.

The life of the late Dr Bryarly, of this city, was insured for $20,000.

Daniel Lyons was found guilty yesterday in the U. S. District Court for selling liquors without a license.

Chinaman Ah Wo was also found guilty of manufacturing cigars without paying Government for the privilege.

Four new cases of small pox reported yesterday; no deaths.

A Government surveying party of ten men, under Col. E. B. Monroe, left this city to-day to run what is called the Ruby valley meridian from White Pine to the Colorado River.

Judge Hacker's Decree.

"A Daniel come to judgment!" Yea, a very Daniel!"—Shylock.

"Dis yere cort come to order," were words uttered by Judge Hannibal Hacker as we entered his court at a village near Lake Providence, in Louisiana. Judge Hacker was a burly, grey-headed man of about fifty years of age, with a complexion of the darkest ebony hue. He was formerly, and for many years, the blacksmith on the plantation of his owner, but since reconstruction his attention has mainly been devoted to commercial pursuits, he being at this time the proprietor of a small grocery where most of the negroes of the vicinity exchanged their produce of eggs, chickens and pigs for tobacco, whisky and other small stores. Adding to his social position, thus acquired, the title of Judge, in virtue of a commission of Justice of the Peace, and it will readily be seen that the Judge was a personage of no ordinary importance.

The authoritative words we have quoted were addressed to a miscellaneous crowd of negroes who had assembled to witness the trial of a case between two of the party, the result of which was looked for with much anxiety as establishing a precedent in the jurisprudence of that locality. The case in question was that of Pompey vs Cato—as we will designate the parties—for the recovery of damages inflicted by the defendant in killing two lady hogs, the property of the plaintiff, who were found in defendant's field rooting up his corn.

When the "court came in," the crowd were discussing the merits of the action and the probable judgment thereon, in a jargon of sounds compared with which the confusion of tongues, recorded as having occurred at the building of the Tower of Babel, would have seemed as mere child's play. As order came from chaos at the bidding of the Creator, so quiet came to the motley crowd when the Honorable Judge gave the command "Dis ere cort come to order." The hearing of the case then proceeded as follows, the language given being a verbatim report:

Judge—"Now, let's hear what am de trubble twixt you gemmen. I hear what Pompey hab to say fust."

Pompey—"Wa'al, now, I se gwine to tell ye de truff, I is."

Judge—"Stop—I hab to swear you fust. Take dis book; you swear to tell nothing but the true particulars in this ere matter, so help you God. Now talk, and remember what you sworn!"

Pompey—"Yes I'm gwine to tell jest de truff, dat I am, jes de truff. De ye see dem ar hogs of mine I had 'em in a pen, yes I jes did—had 'em in a pen, dat's God's truff, and I kin prove it. I had 'em dare jes as tight as I could. I drive nails in de plank only de night afore they got out. Sam dare, he seen me doin' it, didn't you Sam?"

Sam—"Yes, I seen him."

Pompey—"Now, dem hogs it seemed jes they determined not stay in de pen, so in the night dey clar got out, both on 'em. I see jes post off one of de planks and crawl out. I wan't thar and of course couldn't stop 'em. Den dey go into Cato's patch and dey get to rooting his corn. I don't deny dat, I doesn't; but dis I say Cato no business to kill my hogs in dat way, and not say nuffin' to me about it, dat's what I say. Dem hogs was worth a heap of money dey was dat. Big Tom he offered to give me thirty dollars for 'em, that he did, an' I would'n't take it, and den Cato he jes go and kill 'em, and dey was going to had pigs, too. I jes want Cato to pay me for dem hogs, dat's all. I jes wants my pay—he no business to kill hogs in dat way no, sar, no right."

Judge—"Dare now, you jes' shut up, and I hear what Cato get to say. Ah you niggers stop a-talking dare right off."

Cato—"Well, all I say is dis dat when I go out dis morning I find two 'gs a-rooting up my corn, and I so mad I jes' get my gun and shoot 'em. I didn't know whose hogs they was in a'tween, and den Pompey he come at me and say dey was his hogs, and dat he would mash my head. He did dat—he said he would mash my head."

Pompey—"Dey what I say, I will mash your head."

Judge—"Silence in the court, or I'll empty your jaw till you can't chaw. Now, how much of the corn was dem hogs?"

Cato—"Dere was nigh unto an acre and a half—dere was dat—and it mighty nice corn too, Judge you know how to speak to me on how nine corn it was, only last week, and den I go and see dem hogs a jest rooting it. I got clar mad—any man get mad right quick to see hogs do dat way. Wha's Pompey's hogs hurt me a heap more in a roster ob dat corn dan I hurt him a acre dem. Dat are corn was jest as good as any corn I had. Yes, and it would a made forty bushels to the acre. You said dat yourself (to Judge) only last week, and if I damage Pompey thirty dollar, for killin' dem hogs, he hurt me a heap more dan dat. Yes, sir, he hurt me more dan twenty dollars more. He orto pay me for de corn dem hogs spoil, and not try to make me pay for de hogs. Dat was good hogs I know dat—but den who to pay me for de corn? Dat's what I want ter know."

[To the Judge.] You jus go down now and see if what I say ain't jus truff—if dem dere hogs eat up nigh onto an acre and a half."

Judge—"Well, I'll just go down and see de corn myself, and den decide de business."

[Recess of the Court while a survey of the field is made by the Judge. Court reopens.]

Judge—"Well, I'se satisfied, and de way I look at it am dis. Cato say de hogs do spoil nigh onto an acre and a half of his corn, which I hold um true, and also dat de corn bring nigh onto forty bushels to the acre. Now dem hogs do hurt sixty bushels of corn, and dat worth sixty dollars. Now, den, Pompey say his hogs am worth thirty dollars, and I hold that am so. Cort give dis am de opinion of de cort. dat, as de hogs hurt Cato thirty dollars more dan Cato hurt Pompey by de knock of de hogs so Pompey must pay Cato the difference, which is thirty dollars. This am de judgment."

Pompey—"Der Lord—der yer mean to say I'se got to lose my hogs for nuffin, and den pay Cato thirty dollars for a killin' ob 'em? Why, de good Lord, what's de good ob cort? I wish I had kept still, I does dat; de Lord! de Lord!"

Judge—"You jus' stop dat swarin' and pay de money, or else I'se gwine to send you to jail right off for contemptuosness of de Cort."

Pompey, with a most woeful visage, counted out the thirty dollars, meanwhile ejaculating in an undertone, "De Lord! de Lord! to lose dem hogs and den pay for it too in dis way! I'se nebber come to cort agin, no how!"

The Court adjourns amid the buzzing approbation of the spectators at the righteous decision of the upright magistrate.

Plodders manifest muddy precedents may object to such a decision, but if white courts would always administer such justice we should find few persons rushing into litigation.—Boston Sunday Times.

ARTICULARS OF THE SHOCKING AFFAIR—CONFESSION OF THE MURDERER.

[Correspondence of the Iowa Register.]

While I was snow-bound in Monroe I gathered all the information to be had in regard to that horrible murder which occurred near Red Rock a few days ago. It seems that Butler had made up his mind some time ago that his wife must die, as she would not live with him, and he loved her so dearly, he could not see her live with others, and he says he could think of nothing short of death for her and himself also. He says in his confession, that after having some words with his wife in the sitting room, that she got up and started for a bed-room, that stood on the west side; he started after her, when his mother-in-law interfered; that he took up a hair and struck her (his mother-in-law) on the head knocking her down. He then told her to leave the house or he would kill her too. He then went into the bed-room where his wife was, and when she saw him coming she ran out, when he caught her around the waist with his left arm and putting the revolver close to the back of her head, fired, killing her instantly. He then lay down by her side, and putting the pistol to his head snapped all the caps on the remaining barrels, but none would explode. Throwing the revolver away he took a knife he had provided himself with and endeavored to cut his throat. He made a deep and ugly wound, cutting the windpipe half off and many small arteries, but his cutting was all done directly under the chin; he did not reach the main jugular. When his windpipe was cut his breathing became difficult, and at times as the blood from small veins ran in strangulation ensued; so, according to his own feelings, he imagined death would soon release his sufferings. One of his little children, but a few years old, who had been running and crying all around the house came and laid down between them, where it was found by the persons who first reached the house. Such a scene!—the poor innocent child—heart broken, scared—lying between father and mother—the mother dead and the father gasping the last breath that linked him to the world; only a step to eternity.

The author of this sorrow and wickedness is still alive. He converses freely; says he is not sorry for what he has done, and only regrets that he did not succeed in putting an end to himself also. He says his wife was a good woman, one of the dearest and loviest in all the world, and that she has gone straight to heaven, and if he only had died with her he would have gone there too. He had no intention of killing or hurting any one but himself and wife. A preliminary examination was held, and he was bound over to court. Not being able to be removed to jail at Newton a guard was placed over him in the hotel at Red Rock, where he now is.

Editors and Offices.

Ex-Gov. Hawley of Connecticut was known as an able and promising young editor before he gained his laurels as a gallant and accomplished soldier, adding the State with distinguished credit as its Chief Executive, he still owned his newspaper and edited it with great ability though unseen. With a proper consideration for the dignity of his profession, he declined the Governorship and accepted the position which neither rank nor gain enable a man to.

He has shown his good sense by declining [illegible] for Congress? He is [illegible] to go to Congress? He is [illegible] But for his [illegible] bow many of our "great men" sink out of public life, [illegible] and confusion. If he [illegible] he not only sinks a greater dignity in the long run, but loses the superior advantage of receiving information in a manner not office and from a direct feeling of the pulse of the popular heart he will be likely to lose something of his reputation for practical sagacity. Compare, for instance, the position of almost princely power held by Mr. Raymond and Mr. Greeley in their [illegible] with those which they had in Congress.

It is true that the [illegible] tendency to [illegible] journalists for high official positions is [illegible] creditable to the good sense of the people, but we fear that its results may be [illegible] to the people. The only exception [illegible] in which we should favor the action [illegible] by journalists are those of [illegible] or invalid editors who need rest. For [illegible] should be kept vacant a large supply of [illegible] positions. For instance, there is Mr. Greeley, who has been waiting forty years for a chance to "go fishing." He is [illegible] of a first class foreign mission. Such a change might do him good in many ways. The [illegible] of diplomatic life might [illegible] him to adopt softer words for his [illegible] than "liar," "villian," "scoundrel," etc. Let him rest a few years and give the brilliant quartette of subordinates—Messrs. Young, Smalley, Reid, and Hassard—a full [illegible] for their conceded talents.—N. Y. Evening Mail.

The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher again denies having ever commenced a sermon with the phrase, "It is d—d hot!" following it up with "Such was the [illegible] expression, my hearers, I heard from the lips of a young man as I entered church this morning," and then proceeding with his discourse. He further says that he once sent by a young gentlemen the following message to a lady who had insisted that she heard him use the expression denied, in church:

When you go back I wish you would take occasion, before witnesses, to say to this lady, from me, "that she lies, and that she knows that she lies, and that she knows that I know that she lies."

This was very improper language, but I was angry, and, besides, had been reading the Tribune.

Our soldiers in the Indian country, finding an Indian hut, in the crevices of which scalps were thrust to keep out the cold, one of the "Boys in Blue" exclaimed, holding up a scalp, "Well, I've found out now why Indians call their huts wig warms." (wigwams.)

FATAL SHOOTING AFFRAY.—A shooting affray occurred at about half past six o'clock yesterday morning at the "Lone Saloon," corner of Alder and Second streets, by which one man was killed and another seriously, if not fatally, wounded. The facts, as we learn them, are substantially as follows. The saloon is kept by a negro and is doing and gambling house, to which resort white men, negroes, half-breeds and Chinamen. A game of faro has been for some time carried on in the rear room, dealt by a man named Jack Buchard, or his associates. During Saturday night, this game went on as usual, continuing till about six o'clock yesterday (Sunday) morning, when it was closed. About two o'clock, a negro named Hank Jones came in somewhat intoxicated, and commenced betting at the game. In a short time he lost about thirty-five or forty dollars, [illegible] enraged and used threatening language toward Buchard. When the game closed there was a quarrel in the bar-room between the two. Jones went off to his room two or three blocks down Second street, got a pistol and came back to the saloon, thinking to kill Buchard. It [illegible] that Buchard was still in the place, either in the bar-room or billiard room which is just back of it. The negro bar-keeper seized hold of Jones' arm to prevent his [illegible] ting, when instantly Buchard, standing in the billiard-room, began shooting through the door way at Jones. There were several men in the bar-room a small one and they, of course, started for the door to get out of the way. Among this number was Mr. Charles Nealy, who it is [illegible] was one of the keepers of a livery stable on Front street, above Columbia. Before reaching the door, and while endeavoring to get out, he was struck by one of the pistol balls, in the right hip about two inches from the back bone, almost straight forward under the cuticle of the lower part of the abdomen. He fell and without being removed died in a little more than half an hour. Five or six shots in all were fired, and from the evidence produced before the Coroner's inquest, all of them by Buchard. The negro Jones, who began the row, was hit in the thigh, receiving a severe and painful wound, from which and the effects of his drinking, he has been ever since delirious. Dr. Poppleton, Coroner, being a [illegible] of the killing of Nealy, caused a jury to be [illegible] and held an inquest upon the body, at the [illegible] taking house of Brehaud & Mwery. The following [illegible] of the jury:

"We the undersigned jurors sworn, to examine into the [illegible] of the death of M. C. [illegible] Nealy, after hearing the evidence of a number of witnesses present at the time of [illegible] find the following, which resulted in his death, and having examined the premises and all surrounding circumstances connected with his death, we [illegible] his death was caused by a gun shot wound from the hand of Mr. Jack Buchard. (Signed) H. C. Ole[illegible], Pres't — J. J. Curry, A. Labbe, P. D. W. Harris, L. Gill, F. Waterman."

Immediately after the shooting, Buchard left the saloon and going down Second street, disappeared; but before the saloon was closed he gave himself up to the police and was taken to the county jail.

Blake and other officers that went to Sitka as Court Martial duty, have returned.....Rev. Mr. Hines left on Thursday for the Sound.....Mr. E. L. Dole is in the coal mine on the East Fork of Lewis River. He reports the prospects are favorable as ever, and that carpenters [illegible] are mistaken. CONVENTION OF PREACHERS.—The Annual [illegible] of preachers of the M. E. Church, of the [illegible] District, will be held at Hillsboro, May 25th. [illegible] Rev. J. F. Dowse, announces that [illegible] will be delivered by the following persons: Rev. [illegible], Introductory Address; Rev. J. O. Spencer, [illegible]; Rev. I. Dillon, Conversion of the World; Rev. J. M. Wythe, Methodism, its Mission; Rev. A. C. [illegible], Rev. W. I. Cosper, Formalism, its [illegible]; Rev. O. W. Todd, Sunday Schools, their Mission; [illegible] Elias, Spiritual [illegible]; Rev. RAILROAD SUITS FOR RIGHT OF WAY.—Referring to the [illegible] suits in the late Circuit Court of Clackamas [illegible], the Enterprise says: Of the twenty-one suits for the right of way commenced by the railroad company at the term of court just ended, only one came to a contrial. In one case where no defence was made, a [illegible] was empanelled to estimate the damages and proper [illegible] submitted to them. Several cases have been [illegible] settled, and the majority of those continued to the [illegible] term, are cases involving the rights of minor [illegible], which could not be settled by any other course and have to be continued to give all the parties a proper hearing. In the case of Judge A. M. Walt, who owns about [illegible] of land on Baker's Prairie, known as the Beale's [illegible] land claim, a determined contest was made, the [illegible] claimed being $1,200. It occupied over two days. [illegible] was, at the request of Judge Walt, sent out to [illegible], and a large number of witnesses were examined, and as the result a verdict was rendered in favor of [illegible] for fifty dollars damages, which in view of the fact that the Company had in writing tendered Judge Walt one hundred dollars rather than resort to litigation, [illegible] a decided triumph for the Company. We believe the action of this jury is a good index of the sentiment, that the building of railroads through [illegible] should not be hindered by factious opposition and [illegible] desire for gain."

[illegible]—Whereas our beloved brother, Freeman Smith, Jan., was on the 22d inst., removed from [illegible] by the hand of death, therefore, by the members of [illegible]log Star Lodge No. 41, I. O. G. T., be it

Resolved, That in view of this sad event, we hereby [illegible] our heartfelt sorrow, realizing the loss of a beloved brother, faithful friend and zealous laborer in the cause of [illegible]ryance

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with his aged and afflicted parents, brothers and friends in their [illegible] and bereavement.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect to his memory we will wear the usual badge of mourning for twenty days.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the relatives of the deceased, and also the OREGONIAN and O. C. Argus for publication.

A. C. RIGGS,
Committee.

Rose Vista, March 25th, 1869.

CITY ITEMS.—We clip the following items from the Enterprise of Saturday: The Circuit Court adjourned on Thursday. There will be a special term, [illegible] May 10th.....Sheriff Myers disposed of the [illegible] Steamboat Co's sheds several days ago—but they have not yet been removed.....Clackamas county has [illegible] Bonner & Co. $150 00 for the right to use the [illegible] Patent Shackle. It was necessary for the sale [illegible] of prisoners—and the occasional transportation [illegible] Salem.....Mr. J. W. Lewis, Manager of the State Agricultural Society for Clackamas county, has [illegible] A superb silver cup, from the Secretary of the [illegible], to be awarded to Clackamas Base Ball Club of this city. The inscription on the cup tells the whole story. It is as follows: "Champion Cup, Clackamas Base Ball Club, Oregon City; awarded by the State Agricultural Society, October, 1868."

The editor of the Enterprise says: "During the past week we made a short trip to the city of Portland, finding every business there in active operation, hotels crowded, merchants pushing around after the spring trade and all the routes of travel well patronized. The large number of new buildings already in process of erection, show that Portland is to have even more than the usual growth and advancement in real estate there—such a price fully up to the circumstances of the case and the expectations of proprietors. Not only are there many new business houses in course, but the town is spreading back, climbing the rises of the back-ground and exploring the level land of Couch's addition. Portland is growing more than ever before; becoming truly cosmopolitan; will grow more when railroad facilities are finally realized."

AN IMPORTANT PROJECT.—We learn that certain parties, among whom are men of ample capital, have formed a project to improve the Tualatin river by constructing locks at the mouth, so as to allow the passage of steamers across the cascades, to build steamers for the navigation of the Tualatin; and to erect flouring mills and other machinery for manufacturing purposes, at the mouth of the river. The locks—two in number—are to be completed by the time the locks at Oregon City are finished so that boats coming down the Tualatin from the head of navigation, can run straight through to Portland without transferring freight. This enterprise when carried through, will be of vast importance to the large and productive country lying in the valley of the Tualatin.

WILLAMET UNIVERSITY.—Dr Rounds, President of the Willamet University, writes that "The examinations of the several studies of the term, will commence on Tuesday, the 6th of April, will continue through the day on Wednesday, and close at noon on Thursday. The usual weekly rhetorical exercises of declamations and readings of essays, accompanied with music, vocal and instrumental, will occur on Thursday afternoon at the chapel. We invite parents and the friends of the Institution to encourage us by their presence. The Hesperian Literary Society of the young gentlemen hold their public meeting in the chapel on the evening of Wednesday, the 7th of April. Our third term commences on Monday, the 19th of April.

APPLES.—At no time this season have the receipts of green apples been so lively as now. The last of the crop of 1868 will soon, however, be gone.

CONCERT AT VANCOUVER.—The Register announces that Miss Octavia Mercier's concert at Vancouver, will take place next Thursday evening.

HOAGLAND'S
NEW PATENT SHAFT COUPLING!
W. E. COOPER

HAS PURCHASED THE RIGHT FOR THIS County of the above Patent, and will hereafter use it in the construction of all the Vehicles manufactured at his extensive

Carriage Factory,
Corner of Second and Morrison Streets.

Respectfully refers to the following
CARD.

Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling, invented by H. R. Hoagland, we feel pleasure in informing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used

It fastens without bolt or screw, and is therefore, easily and speedily separated. It rests on Gutta Percha so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which so often disturbs restless horses. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant, and is convenient, safe and secure.

It is easy to change to this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion to use this new invention ourselves and recommend its use in all cases. We consider it far superior to the Brewster Patent, heretofore considered the best in use

The undersigned who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise which commands here and in the markets of the interior a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who by counterfeit or imitation of his mark seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive only after a time, but only adds to the favorable opinion of the consumers, the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless, buyers should be forewarned, and placed on their guard against this practice

A Voice from Vancouver

Because we have attempted to show what is delaying the proposed railroad subsidies and to inform the people here why those subsidies will probably fail for the present, a few persons of limited perception and shallow judgment see, or pretend to see, in this action a disposition on the part of the OREGONIAN "to throw cold water on railroad enterprises on the Pacific slope." A writer in the Vancouver Register in noticing this matter makes use of the words just quoted. Do these people ever stop to think what they are writing or talking about? A moment's reflection should convince them that the OREGONIAN has the deepest interest in every railroad enterprise which can affect the Pacific slope. Should we put the case on the ground of self-interest alone, we might answer these cavillers that we want as many railroads built as possible in order to increase the population of the country, enlarge the circulation of the OREGONIAN, and be able to send our paper the same day it is published in every direction to patrons even hundreds of miles away. Nothing develops the business of journalism like railroads, since they give opportunity for a wide circulation and general distribution of newspapers. A scheme of subsidies has been proposed for the benefit of the Pacific slope which it would rejoice us to see carried through; and we know that there is a general feeling of anxiety and even of impatience here in regard to it. But the business of the journalist is to give the people correct and practical information, not to mislead them. Therefore since we regard it as quite certain that until the financial embarrassments of the country are measurably relieved no more subsidies, except lands, will be granted for railroad purposes, it is proper for us to say so, and to show what the opinion is based upon. It appears that the Vancouver writer witnesses this "with grief and indignation." Would he be better pleased if we should enthusiastically declare that the subsidies are certain to be granted at once, when there is little or no probability that they will be so granted? Would he rather be disappointed at a future time than to look at the matter now, intelligently, and with a perception of the actual situation? From the action of Congress and the tone of the Eastern press we are satisfied that there is a strong feeling to withhold further subsidies of bonds until the credit of the Government shall be improved. Speaking of the policy of aiding these enterprises President Grant in his inaugural address said that they should wait until "a dollar of obligation to pay secures the same as a dollar to us now;" or to put it differently, until our bonds and paper currency become as good as gold. The disposition to do anything which shall in any further degree embarrass the public credit at so critical a time, is what delays the subsidies. It is proper for us to make the people here acquainted with these facts. We shall then all understand the matter. We have never yet been able to see in any case the wisdom of shutting out from our minds the real situation of affairs. The credit of the Government is steadily improving; our bonds are constantly rising in the market, and after President Grant shall have had time to right the disorders which were produced by the mad ... icy of his predecessor, our national affairs will assume a settled shape and the subsidies will, as we confidently believe, be granted.

Reducing Expenditures.

Congress and the President are co-operating in reducing the expenditures and establishing greater efficiency in the public service, with results which promise most favorably for the credit and the welfare of the country. Already it is stated that the revenue receipts from several quarters begin to improve, showing an increased efficiency in their collection. In almost every department of Government a material reduction of expenses has commenced. Many source of expenditure which have heretofore contributed largely to prevent a diminution of the debt have been cut off. Soldiers' bounties, which last year amounted to about $40,000,000, are now nearly or quite all paid. The Freedmen's Bureau has been discontinued with the exception of the educational branch, which is almost self-supporting. Reconstruction being nearly finished, the expenses of the Government on this head will amount to very little hereafter. The reduction of the navy has been so considerable that that branch of the service cannot cost much more than before the war, and a still greater saving will be effected by the reduction of the army. It is stated that the Government will save $15,000,000 annually by this last measure alone. It is observable also that all supernumeraries in the departments at Washington, and all employees elsewhere whose services can at all be dispensed with, are being dismissed from their positions with a view to reducing expenses to the lowest possible limit. This policy will tell favorably upon the public debt by the close of the year. The future is full of promise for the credit of the Government and the prosperity of the country. Reforms which have been delayed by the madness of the last President and the menaces of the ex-rebels and their political allies, can and will be now brought about. The national debt will be steadily diminished during President Grant's term, though the reduction may be slow at first until the various measures of retrenchment can be brought into full operation.

Small Notes.

The New York Sun observes that General Grant recently took occasion to rebuke the attempt to create a breach between himself and the Republican party, and remarked that after Andrew Johnson's attempt and failure, no one but a madman would repeat it.

"When the last rail on the Pacific railroad shall have been laid, the world will no longer have frontier," says the New York Herald. If that be so, says the Sacramento Bee of the 16th inst., the frontier is pretty near gone, for that last rail left Sacramento on Sunday morning on its winding way!

The indications are that Garfielde will receive the Republican nomination for delegate to Congress from Washington Territory without much opposition in the Convention. All the counties on the Sound which have elected delegates to the Convention appear to have chosen Garfielde men.

The New York Tribune observes that, "Gen. Hancock's reply to the Democrats who have been urging him to become their candidate for Governor in Pensylvania, does him tardy credit. It would have been better for his fame if he had made the discovery some time earlier, shy at New Orleans for example, that he could not creditably interfere with politics as long as he remained in the army. But he has shown himself so good a soldier and so poor a politician that we are glad to note, even at this late day the symptoms of his intention to confine himself hereafter to a business he understands."

During the last year the national debt has considerably increased, the increase being caused in large part by the issue of Pacific railroad bonds. From month to month the Herald has noticed this increase and set up demagogical complaints about it. At the same time it is complaining that more subsidies are not granted, which would make a still larger showing of increase. The Herald, like all papers of its class, is very hard to please.

The Governor of Indiana has called a session of the Legislature of that State to meet on the 8th April. The Oregon Herald says the Democratic members ought to refuse to obey the call, so as to prevent the ratification of the constitutional amendment. It will be seen that this paper which has had so much to say in condemnation of the "revolutionary action" of the Republicans in Oregon thinks it is all right and proper for Democrats in Indiana "to conspire to destroy the Legislative branch of the State Government."

Beriah in his hebdomadal of Saturday, has a long obituary article on Andy Johnson. The Herald, the day before, had obituaried him in briefer, but not less encomiastic and regretful, words. We doubt not but all these Democratic editors who have been so sorrowfully writing the epitaph of the man whom they once called a "lower creature than Caligula's horse," will now take pleasure in informing their readers that Johnson still lives, and that he has only been renewing his devotion to the "Constushun" in a "big drunk," so as to qualify himself for a campaign in Tennessee.

The sparring continues in a lively manner between the discarded editor of the Herald and his successor. Beriah says that Pennoyer, "in his first feeble efforts to edit a Democratic newspaper made Jefferson the "leading spirit of the Constitutional Convention,' and subsequently made Alexander Hamilton, one of the authors of the Federalist, one of the men who opposed the adoption of the Constitution." Well, suppose he did? These mistakes are nothing at all to the blunders which Beriah's ignorance led him to commit every week in the year while he was editor of the Herald.

Letter from the Valley.

ALBANY, March 26, '69.

The river has reached tolerable fair boating as far as Albany and Corvallis, and yesterday the Echo started up to Harrisburg, from where she will be able to bring a part of a load. The oldest settlers aver that they have never known the river to remain so low during Fall, Winter and Spring as through the past. But one trip has been made to Eugene during the season, consequently nearly the entire crop of last year is yet to be brought to market. At Peoria, Harrisburg, Eugene and other places, large quantities of flour and grain are stored, waiting a rise in the river. Notwithstanding the difficulty and expense of navigating the Willamet, her commerce is regularly increasing each year. Thirty thousand tons of freight were carried down this river during the last year, besides the large quantities hauled down upon the various roads. It is estimated that the present crop of grain will be from one fifth to one fourth greater than that of any previous year, providing the season is reasonably productive. The winter has been so favorable that much new prairie has been broken, which will increase the breadth of grain sown largely above that of any other year.

A number of Californians are here buying up sheep, cattle and horses. The price of horned cattle has been steadily increasing for some years throughout the stock growing regions of the State. The demand for stock and beef cattle in California is constantly growing, while many of the Oregon farmers are turning their pastures into grain fields. Sheep are selling for $1 50 to $2 25 per head. Cattle—yearlings, $11 to $12; two year-olds at $18 to $22. None but the best horses are sought by the buyers, and they are bringing from $125 to $225 per head.

In Eugene and Corvallis, and throughout the counties of Lane and Benton money seems to be plenty, and almost everybody has twenty dollar pieces in their pockets to jingle. But at Albany, surrounded by the great grain fields of Linn county, money is rather scarce, and people are complaining of hard times. This is on account of the low price of wheat, much of which is yet held by the farmers, and speculators.

Corvallis, Eugene and Springfield exhibit unmistakable marks of improvement, and the country generally has the appearance of thrift and prosperity.

Spring has really come, and 'tis well—especially for those fond of good living. The beef that we find on the tables is generally poor and the butter abominable. At Salem butter was worth five bits per pound, and but very little good butter could be had at that price. At Corvallis it was worth four bits, and very scarce. At Eugene it was only worth three bits, but equally as scarce as at either of the former places. But in a few days the new grass will make it plenty and cheap. It is delightful at this season, to leave the brick walls and paved streets of the city for a time, and get out into our beautiful country and breathe the sweet breath of Spring, and tread upon her soft carpet of green grass; and to see the splendid landscapes—pictures more beautiful than can be found at Shanahan & Hillman's.

Letter from Roseburg.

ROSEBURG, March 24, 1869.

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

Roseburg is a place of no mean importance; and we expect some day to see the railroad completed here. The surveyors have located the line to this point, and are now trying to find a practical pass through the town. They have surveyed three lines—one east of town, along the foothills, one through the center, and one along the bank of the river, west of town. As Roseburg is located on a high plain, the grade to reach it will be a heavy one; but they are compelled to go through the valley in which the town is located. Everybody here is excited about roads, railroads and wagon roads, and surely no section of the State is more in need of roads than this.

The stockholders of the Coos Bay Wagon Road held a meeting here last Monday. The stock was all taken, and Directors located. They propose to go to work immediately on the road and finish it the coming summer. As to the coming railroad, every man has his own opinion. It will, of course, be of greater expense and more difficult to build a railroad through the Umpqua country—the valley of hills—than along the valleys that border the Willamet. But still we here in this wooden country, of tangled hills, and high, undulating landscapes, can talk railroad as loud as you down at the emporium. This is the place to send your poets, if you have any. Here they can come and dream in peace, and get their fullness of the poetry of nature.

Business here is lively. The late copious showers of rain were badly needed, and now farmers say that without any more rain crops will be fine. Cattle buyers are already here, and buying large droves to drive to the mining districts and the Humboldt country. Sheep buyers are paying good prices and buying large flocks of mutton sheep, for driving. Horse traders are here selecting fine horses for the San Francisco market.

Pittsfield, Mass., has a colored citizen of whom she has no reason to be ashamed. His name is Festus Campbell. He is able to speak some six or eight languages fluently and correctly. He has traveled in Europe a number of seasons, and but recently returned from a trip through Italy, Syria, the Holy Land, and Egypt, and is now in possession of quite a fortune, accumulated by his industry and frugality. His name was recently stricken from the list of names presented to the town by the selectmen to be voted for as the list of jurors, by the united vote of the Democrats, because he was a "d—d nigger."

STATE ITEMS

The Polk County Signal will be ... by J. H. Upton, publisher, is going to White Pine.

A quantity of dried apples have been shipped from Salem to Wallula. This is an unusual shipment.

A coal bank is opening on Coquille river ... county. This coal is an extension of the ... Bay coal measures.

Two cases now being heavily charged for ... the ordering of a new bell, have been tried at Marysville, Yuba county.

Jason L. ..., who died at his home near Jacksonville last week, was a member of the Legislature that framed the Provisional Government of Oregon.

The Unionist of Sunday reports that on the preceding day a penitentiary convict named Hibbard, sentenced at the last term of the Circuit Court of Marion county, made an assault upon one of the guards, when he was shot and also killed.

Luther Tilton, of Calliope, died at his residence near Eugene City last week, in the sixty-first year. He was a native of Kentucky, came to Oregon in 1852, and was a member of the Legislature in 1864. He was widely known and highly respected for his virtues.

From the Corvallis paper: An aged and esteemed citizen of this county, Mr. Beriah Robinson, died at his residence, some three miles northwest of Corvallis, very suddenly, on last Wednesday morning. He had been complaining of something like rheumatism, but had eaten his breakfast, and was walking about as usual, until within an hour of his death.

There are three companies of soldiers at Camp Harney. A letter from that place says there will be a chance for some enterprising young men to come out here from the valley and take up claims and supply the Government with forage. Harney Lake valley is as fertile as the Willamet. There are thousands of acres here to be had for the trouble of taking them up.

A correspondent of the Salem Press writes from Coos Bay that a vein of quartz of astonishing richness has been struck on Salmon Gulch. The facts are simply the following: During last summer, a man named Dunbar, found a boulder very rich in gold, and thereupon raised a company to prospect for the ledge, which by perseverance has at last been found. It is four feet wide, and will yield, it is supposed, $2,000 to $3,000 to the ton. The ground is already staked off for some distance in the vicinity of the mine by claimants of extensions.

The Corvallis paper says: Articles of incorporation, we understand, have been filed by a company for the purpose of navigating the Willamet river, between Eugene City and Oregon City. Their capital stock is filed at $15,000 in shares of $50 each. The names of the incorporators are James Edwards, Thomas Reader, S. B. Cranston, R. R. Rounds, S. Stannus, James Bruce, O. C. Swain, William Gatlinghouse, R. Smith and C. B. Bellinger. It is the intention of this company to devote a portion of their energies to navigating the Long Tom river as far as Monroe—which place has been visited three or four times by the steamer Ann.

The Salem Press says a friend in Polk county, who has himself sold his farm with the intention of removing to the east side of the Cascade range, says he knows about thirty families in that county who have made the same arrangements. There are a number from this county who are also on the move. The most of these are pioneer settlers who have sold good farms and go full handed with considerable bands of cattle. Their principal object in making the change is to get cheaper lands with a more extensive range for cattle. The lands here are becoming too valuable, and ownerships too circumscribed to make stock raising as profitable as it has heretofore been.

A correspondent of the Eugene Journal writes from Camp Harney, March 8th: "There are now encamped one-half mile from the Post about 500 Piute and Snake Indians, who have been rationed with beef and flour this winter by the Government. But at the end of this month they will have to go out into the mountains, and subsist themselves the best they can. In my opinion their thirst for the blood of the white man is over. Quite a number have died this winter from some unknown cause. Now that there is peace with the Indians, prospectors need not fear to travel over this country, wherever they want to go. I think it as safe here as in the Wallamet valley. I have traveled over almost all the country east of this, with three men, and felt as safe as when in the Post."

From the Salem Unionist: There never has been a time, perhaps, since the settlement of this country and the founding of Salem, when real estate has been in such good demand and when prices ruled so high as at the present time. As an illustration to the point, we may refer to the sale of lots in Reed's addition. About two months since, Gen. C. A. Reed purchased a tract of land lying to the east of the city, and had it surveyed into lots. Since that time he has disposed of every lot he will sell, at from $250 to $350 apiece, and yet he daily has applications for what he will not sell. The property he has disposed of sold in the aggregate for $10,550. Lots in the older part of the city command larger prices, but there are but a few to be had at any price.

A correspondent of the Yamhill Courier writes: On yesterday (Thursday, March 18th), between six and eight o'clock, A. M., there was a brisk rain about six miles above Sheridan, in this county. The rain was accompanied by what to superficial observers seemed to be a kind of hail, but upon investigation the "hail" was found not to be genuine hail, but very peculiar whitish colored worms—millions of them. Each worm had the power of doubling up and skipping a foot or more. These worms were larger in size than ordinary sewing thread, and, from an eighth to a quarter of an inch long. They appeared to die very soon, and after death seemed to draw up to about half their former length. Each of these worms had a small darkish speck about its head. Where did they come from?

Sixteen years ago, four locust trees, small saplings, were planted in front of John Bingman's property, on the southwest corner of Seventh and H streets, Sacramento. A few days since they were cut down. From their trunks, twenty-one wagon hubs were made, and from the remaining parts, not the trees, four cords of firewood were obtained.

It appears that on that day the Directors of the Company had all the stock owned by them transferred in lots of twenties to give to other parties in order to cast a large vote, but finding at the close of the day that even then, they would be beaten by opposition to the white line ticket, kept the books open eighteen days more, and in the meantime bought more stock, which they had transferred to parties who do not really own stock, until they thought they had enough, when they closed the books. The injunction was granted.

Sheridan has issued orders assuming the command of the military District of Missouri, with Headquarters at Chicago.

The steamer Comerict has been armed and fitted out as a gunboat and sailed to-day from Cardinas to intercept the expected expedition from Nassau. The steamer Courandi-taro, captured by the passengers, carried but one day's supply of coal. Vessels arrived to day report seeing her off Starrup Keys under sail.
